From Editor's Desk

The days are gone where hardwork alone can get you in greater heights of success. Today, employers look for people who can work diligently in a smart manner; because they know how to prioritize their work by efficiently managing their time and generate better results. Hardwork concentrates on dedication and physical effort; whereas smartwork emphasizes on efficient planning.

It is the person who has managed to do work on time, taken the time to build relationships with his colleagues and bosses, get the proper recognition. Wish you all a Merry Christmas & Prosperous New Year.

Fr. Binoy Nareparambil, Chief Editor

Editor's Ink

An prospective student is one who learns from his past, observes his present and one who could predict his future. He can efficiently manage ups and downs throughout his journey of life. He knows the uniqueness of his own potential, and can foster specific and innate core competencies gifted by God.

It is the introspective teacher who ultimately enlightens and converts an ordinary student to a prospective one. They are the potters who moulds the students into persons embedded with knowledge and wisdom.

Thus, its not the institution, not the university, not the syllabus, nor the marks that contribute to our societal and national prosperities but a dedicated bunch of prospective students and introspective teachers who thrive for excellence.
