My dear friend!

A SAINTLY BISHOP GENTLY TROD AWAY THIS SOIL...

"Such a Soul lived on this earth" exclaimed the greatest scientist Einstein, about Mahatma Gandhi. His surprise is an astounding credit to all the Indians down the years. Just like that, our beloved Bishop, who had his journey to the eternal abode on 10th July 2016, is our solitary boast before God and other people. For me it was quite an unexpected news: As my phone clinged I attended and I could sense a signal of something unfortunate. From the other end was a soft and shivering voice: "Bishop Puzhayattil has been rushed to Jubilee Mission Hospital". I remember, the days preceding, were disturbing with regard to his health. Often he was admitted in St. James, but only for few days. After the initial confusion and coma, he was coming back to life, yet doctors were apprehensive. I spent a whole day with him in the ICU.

slowly but firmly he spoke to me. I had a very fruitful interaction with him; unfortunately it was the last one. I know the saintly soul wholly dedicated to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, was saying adieu to his own heart. And at last it happened: in the wee hours of a rainy July Sunday he left us all, to the angelic world beside the Throne of the Almighty. "When the heart is full, words are few". I could quip nothing. The waves of memories haunted my soul. As the first Bishop of our Diocese he steered the ship forward along the troubled waters to the shore of harmony and progress; to the holy enchanted union of faith and social spirit.

As he was a man of prayer, his solid trust in the Providence of God made everything incredibly possible and tangibly experiential. Truly he was a saintly soul. His incessant prayers with innocent heart were the fragrant incense for the Loving Father who deigned to provide everything for the Diocese- KOINONIA of the priests, the deep faith of the ordinary man in the street, the social progress in the field of education and health care. The long strides of development made by the whole Diocese during his tenure of 32 years of shepherding are encrypted in the annals of the history of the Diocese.

He was a man of wisdom, a teacher to the core. It was his style to quote very often in his talks, the famous poet Robert Frost:

"The woods are lovely, dark and deep
But I have promises to keep
And miles to go before I sleep
And miles to go before I sleep."

Before he slept in the Lord he kept all the promises and during his retirement days he had ample time to muse with the seminarians, to bless scores of agonized souls, to pray and meditate over the trivial nature of the life and the meaninglessness of the pomp of power and heraldry. In the later days he was so unassuming that everybody could approach him at any time with any request; so magnetic was he, that all the priests of the Diocese were attracted to his saintly persona. I dare to pose him par with St. Teresa of Calcutta, as he spared none from his bosom of mercy and love and friendship. The world today cannot dream of a Bishop so simple and sincere and his unblemished life throughout the long 82 years speaks volumes of a great inspiration for all men of God. Although he has left for the invisible world forever, he has bequeathed the choicest blessings for our generation and generations to come.

Dean's Message

Prof. K. A. Siraj MSc, MPhil
(Dean of Science, HOD of Physics)

Science has a lot of definitions reveals its vision and activity. One of the definitions touching all aspects of Science is "The intellectual and practical activity encompassing the systematic study of the structure and behaviour of the physical and natural world through observation and experiment".

If scientists are constantly trying to make new discoveries or to develop new concepts and theories, then the body of knowledge produced by science should undergo constant change. Such change is progress toward a better understanding of nature. It is achieved by constantly questioning whether our current ideas are correct. As the famous American astronomer Maria Mitchell (1818-1889) put it, "Question everything". Yes, Science is a self-correcting system.

The result is that theories come and go, or at least are modified through time, as old ideas are questioned and new evidence is discovered. In the words of Karl Popper, "Science is a history of corrected mistakes", and even Albert Einstein remarked of himself "That fellow Einstein . . . every year retracts what he wrote the year before". Many scientists have remarked that they would like to return to life in a few centuries to see what new knowledge and new ideas have been developed by them - and to see which of their own century's ideas have been discarded. Our ideas today should be compatible with all the evidence we have, and we hope that our ideas will survive the tests of the future. However, any look at history forces us to realize that the future is likely to provide new evidence that will lead to at least somewhat different interpretations.

Always from the beginning of Universe, people harvested the fruits of science to improve their living standards. Without the advancement of science, we couldn't even enjoy almost all in the field of Travel, communication, Medical science etc.

We, at Sahrdaya, Under the faculty of Science, offering programmes in Physics, Chemistry, Mathematics, Computer Science, Information technology, Psychology and Geology. Definitely we are providing the said programmes in anticipation to equip the science with remarkable contributions in the coming years, for the welfare of human being, especially to achieve better living standards for a peaceful life. Research is not just an academic activity now a days. The scope of research as a curriculum based parameter to attain any degree has changed. Even the perception of research as restricted to scientific areas has also changed and has gained wider arena where companies now thrive on R&D through which new product and services are developed, marketing research as a separate area of study has evolved and new employment opportunities are created in this field through the rising of IT& ITES companies. So to orient our students to this vast area of employability we are conducting Research Orientation to all our first, second and third year students are given practical and hands on experience in the field of research through live projects and mini projects.
